Online brokerage access on the rise

Nearly 75% of the U.S. population, or 204.3 million people, have access to the Internet from home, according to a study by Nielsen/Netratings¹.

What's more, online trading continues to grow in popularity with American investors. By 2005, it is projected that 9.3 million U.S. households will be accessing brokerage accounts online².

Why? Online brokerage account access lets you check positions and balances, place orders, get market data, research, and more, all on your own timetable.

Access market data to gain a global perspective on Treasury and market indices

Convenient online access to your brokerage account

View balances and positions at virtually any time

Placing orders and reviewing vital account information — like balances, positions, and order status — has never been easier. Online access lets you do all this and more virtually any time and anywhere it's most convenient for you.

Get the latest market data and quotes

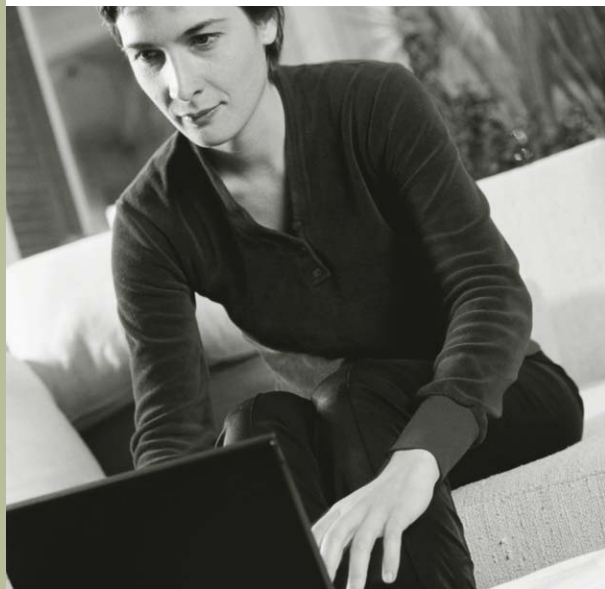

With Web access to your brokerage account, you'll find the financial information you need, all in one place. Now you can get quotes, set up personal quote lists, or check equity and Treasury market indices, as well as volume activity on the major exchanges.

You can even view comprehensive company research from many well-known providers such as Lehman Brothers³, get company profiles from Multex³, and read the latest news reports about your target companies.

Place orders

Your online brokerage account also includes a trading capability. Plus, whenever you place an order, you'll have access to order status and account balances, and be able to view your confirmation online the next day.

Of course, with every financial transaction you make, you can feel more at ease knowing that all your account information is secure and password-protected.

Use financial planning tools to evaluate various investment scenarios

Financial planning tools at your fingertips

Online access allows you to review financial planning tools for asset allocation, college planning, and retirement — all designed to perform a variety of financial calculations to help you make informed decisions.
